Dave Brinkley's Journal Used

Havana—The program, David Brinkley's Journal, televised in Montreal, Canada, devoted one of its transmissions to the Cuban counterrevolutionary organizations that operate in the United States.

One of those interviewed on the program, Dagoberto Barias, a representative in parliament during the tyranny of Fulgencio Batista, declared that agents of the Central Intelligence Agency, who were in command of everything related to the thwarted invasion of Playa Giron, had personally assured him that the mercenaries would have the unlimited support of the U.S. fleet and air force.

For his part, the commentator of the program said that if there is another attack against Cuba, the date and form, despite anything the Cuban counterrevolutionaries may say, will be selected in Washington and not in Miami. The commentator concluded by saying Fidel Castro is as strong now as he demonstrated in the Playa Giron incident, and he advised the Cubans in the United States that the best thing they can do is to make themselves as comfortable as possible there.
